Now th	nat you've created your list, look at the list of strategies below for avoiding experiences. Place a check mark b	by each strategy you've ever used in an effort to get rid of the thoughts, feelings, behaviors and memoi	ries that you listed on the previous page.
	Worrying about it
	Trying not to think about it
	Trying to distract myself
	Staying busy
	Finding other things to do
	Dwelling on the past
	Catastrophizing about the future
	Fantasizing about escaping the situation (e.g. quitting your job, leaving your spouse, etc.)
	Imagining revenge
	Imagining suicide
	Thinking "Life's not fair"
	Thinking "I must" or "I must not"
	Thinking "I should have" or "I would have" or "I could have"
	Second-guessing past decisions
	Anticipating future problems
	Blaming myself
	Shaming myself
	Guilt-tripping myself
	Blaming others
	Shaming others
	Guilt-tripping others
	Blaming the world
	Substance abuse (alcohol, drugs, etc.)
	Overeating, or not eating, as a method of stress relief
	Addictive behaviors (gambling, worrying, being depressed, "woe is me" pity parties)

Now ask yourself:

- 1. Did any of these strategies work in the long run?
- 2. Did any of these strategies actually make the things worse instead of better?
- 3. If you were able to live in the "now" of existence, instead of in the mind trap, how many of the things you were trying to get rid of would still be a problem?

Think of one thing from the list that you would like to get rid of Go outside to your own sacred space, ground and center, and just allow yourself to experience the thing you were trying to get rid of. Open yourself completely to the experience in the present moment, without assumptions about the past or expectations about the future. Just be in the now with the thing you were trying to get rid of.

Did this change your experience? By accepting it instead of trying to avoid it, do you look at it in a different way? What did being in your sacred space add to the experience, if anything?
